IS THEIR DRILL BEHIND THE AGE!

GENERAL WINGATE MAKES SUGGESTIONS FOR THE GOOD OF NATIONAL GUARDSMEN.

General George W. Wingate, of the National Rifle elation, scouts the idea of there being any serious conflict between the association and the National Guard over Creedmoor. General Robbins, of the association, said recently that he did not know of any officer of the National Guard who was disposed to crowd the association off Creedmoor. General Wingate said the same thing and also spoke enthusiastically of the National Guard's movement to secure a paradeground in Van Courtlandt Park. Then he was led to give an idea of changes which he would like to see nade in American military tactics, substantially as follows: "I consider the acquisition of the parade-grounds in

Van Courtlandt Park as one of the most important steps ever taken by the National Guard. The ground should have electric lights, so that those men could be drilled in the night who could not get away from their business in the day time. But here is an important matter which should be considered. Our system of drilling is utterly impracticable for military purposes. The fighting of the future will be done in open order by successive lines of skirmishers. In structors should recognize this fact. The Germans lay down the rule that troops must not be dispersed in times of peace, and their military experts have wiped out nine-tenths of parade manocuvres. In fact, they have reduced manoeuvres to paying attention to the individual in skirmishing in open order. We, on the other hand, with the exception of the instructors at the State Camp drill, form men in close order forming in line and making changes in front, etc. These tactics are not practicable.

"I seriously doubt whether there is a military organization in this State which can make an attack such as is required by European systems. These systems consist of successive lines of shirmishers, which are deployed and reinforced without getting in inextricable confusion. Possibly such manoeuvres may inextricable confusion. Possibly such manocuvres may have been practised here, but I have never known of it. It is the exact thing which we should have to employ sgainst an armed and organized mob, for example.

He served in the Mexican and Civil wars, but is not a member of any post. The first book found upon him by Captain McLaughlin showed that he had collected about $2,000. Another book showed the collection of another $2,000. Potter is sixty-one years old, and has a wife, children and grandehildren. He says he lives at No. 21 Willisave, Yonkers.

All the bills for medals, rent and other expenses of the new organiza-tion's meetings for the last year were audited and ordered paid. Coffey, the rector of the parish for the last thirty-six Coffey, the rector of the parish for the last thirty-six years, read a paper giving an interesting history of the church from the time of its erection in 1704 to the present date. Divine service was not held in the building until 1788, for during the Revolution it was used as a hospital and as a court-house. Among the many interesting relies preserved in the vestry of the church is a subpoena signed by Aaron Burr, summonling a resident of the town to appear at a trial held in the building, where the accused was found guilty of house stealing and sentenced to be hanged.

THEY GAVE THE CHILD BEEFSTEAK. C. B. Whilden, the drug clerk whose mistaks in compounding a prescription was supposed to have caused the death of a child named O'Connor, had an examination before Judge Stilling yesterday. A number of witnesses were called, among them the parents of the child, who testified that they gave him beefsteak to eat on the day he died although he was suffering from scarlet fever. County Physician Converse said that convulsions were common in cases of searlet fever. In his opinion there was nothing in the nedicine which caused or hastened the child's death. Whilden was remanded until Monday, Judge Silising saying that he desired to examine the case carefully, as Whilden had evidently made a mistake for which he might be held responsible even if the child's death did not result from it.
